Culture Dig Access and Invitation Checklist

Facts current as of 2026-11-07

Before anyone is invited

- [ ] List the organization's Owners and Admins. Every one of them acts as Program Lead in every program.
- [ ] For any Admin who must not see fieldwork (for example, an executive whose decisions are under study): add an explicit Participant row in this program, or ask them to step down from Admin for the duration. Tell them why.
- [ ] Owners can't be scoped down. If an Owner shouldn't see fieldwork, that's a conversation, not a setting.

Roles

- Program Lead (×2): give it to the client's project owner and a backup who is also an org admin (so they can buy waves). Never to someone likely to act on raw evidence.
- Facilitator: an advising consultant. Never an executive whose decisions are under study.
- Team Member: researchers, one domain each, mixed by site, level and tenure. Never people researching their own decisions; people interviewing their own reports.
- Participant: only if you want a roster, or to scope down an Admin.

Invitations (amber line under the name)

- "Hasn't set up their account yet": new account, no password yet (setup link lasts 7 days). Resend; follow up in person.
- "Hasn't accepted the invitation yet": existing account outside the org's staff. They sign in as that account and press Accept (14 days); Resend for a fresh link.
- "Invitation didn't send": email failed. Check the address; fix a typo by removing and re-adding.
- No line: nothing to chase (set up, already on the org's staff, or a Participant). Nothing.

Kickoff briefing for researchers

- [ ] Source = role and context, never a name; no names of people mentioned either.
- [ ] Story text you can export is confidential research material.
- [ ] Interviewees are told: voluntary, role-level attribution at most, can stop any time.
