Mosaic Practitioner Code of Practice

As a Mosaic practitioner, I will:

1 Protect the people who answered.

- I won't try to work out who said what.
- I won't show results for a group below the report's minimum.
- I won't help anyone else do either of those things.
- When a client asks "who said that?", the answer is always no.

2 Tell respondents the truth about confidentiality.

In a Leadership Mosaic 360, boss feedback is attributed to the boss. I'll say so before launch. I won't promise "everything is anonymous" when it isn't.

3 Claim only what the evidence supports.

- The research linking culture to performance comes from comparable frameworks. It is not Mosaic-specific validation, and I'll describe it that way.
- I'll treat a pattern as a hypothesis for dialogue, not as proof of cause.

4 Keep development separate from evaluation.

I'll position a 360 as development. I won't help a client use it for pay, promotion or performance-review decisions.

5 Respect data rights.

- I'll honour a client's choice to stay out of the Mosaic benchmark, and their consent decisions at checkout.
- I'll never mix test responses into real results.

6 Use the tools as designed.

- I won't alter locked items.
- I won't copy a purchased survey to reuse it.
- I won't share a partner code with a client. It is for my own purchases only.

7 Describe culture without judging it.

Culture isn't good or bad. I'll describe what it does and what it costs.

8 Close the loop.

I'll encourage every client to share what they learned with the people who took part.
