FRONT: CULTURE DIG FIELD CARD

Your job: gather evidence about how culture really works in your domain. Document it; don't judge it.

Every observation has three parts

- Source: role and context. 🔒 NEVER a name. For example, "Clinic coordinator, team meeting".
- Quote: as near to verbatim as you can.
- Theme: a short label. Reuse the team's wording for the same pattern.

One entry per piece of evidence, not one per interview.

Good questions

- "Tell me about a time that could only have happened here."
- "What happens to someone who…?"
- "How did you learn that's how things work here?"

BACK: BEFORE, DURING, AFTER

Before: read your domain guide (focus, 4 research questions, 3 methods). Tell interviewees that their words may be quoted by role, never by name.

During:

- Ask for stories, not opinions.
- Note artifacts. Ask permission before photographing people.
- Don't record names of people mentioned either.

After:

- Enter observations the same day.
- Write your synthesis. It becomes your domain's report section.
- Submit only when ready, because it locks the workspace.

Remember: "Culture is not good or bad. Describe what it does and what it costs."
